

CHAPTER 4:

RAPID HOUSING AND SHELTERS

INTRODUCTION

Appropriate housing may be difficult to find due to requirements and background information needed. There are options including federal housing opportunities for low-income families, and halfway houses to help you through early sobriety. Learn about the different housing options and find one that works best for you.

FINDING SAFE & SECURE HOUSING WITH A BACKGROUND

With upwards of 60,000 inmates, over 160,000 probationers, and more than 25,000 parolees, state agencies are struggling to provide for the specific needs of each offender. According to a few experts, the right programs are in place, but there simply is not enough funding to serve the entire inmate population as needed.

Where do you plan to live when you get released from prison? Do you have a residence plan?

Have a backup, then have another backup residence plan! Whether you are getting out on parole, with probation, or maxing out, the area where you plan to reside will greatly influence where and how you access the services you need. While you may initially plan to live with a family member and then eventually get your own place, chances are you will continue to be in the same general area and use many of the services you will identify in this workbook. When looking for housing, keep in mind where it is located relative to your work, what transportation is available, and what stores are in the area. Make sure you have asked the person you plan to live with if it is okay for you to live there. No one wants to be blindsided or put on the spot by a Community Supervision Officer checking out a possible parole residence for a person without having had any prior knowledge.

CHOOSING THE BEST HOUSING OPTION

Isolation from the world beyond the prison walls remains a real impediment to offenders securing job opportunities, housing, transportation, and other supports prior to their release.

ADDICTION

Another area where prisons have struggled to meet the needs of offenders is in treating those with drug addictions. The U.S. Department of Justice estimates that “70-80 percent of offenders are under supervision for drug-related offenses.” A number of these offenders have substance abuse issues that require ongoing treatment and detox; however, many are not receiving this necessary treatment because of limited resources. Effective evidence-based programs, such as Residential Substance Abuse Treatment (RSAT) centers, are not available at every prison in the state. To make matters worse, addictions are being fueled inside of many prisons through easy access to drugs. One transitional center reported that it is easier for an offender to get drugs inside of a prison than outside. As a result, offenders leave prison with the same addictions that contributed to their initial incarceration, increasing the likelihood that they return to prison.

FORMING REAL CONNECTIONS

Isolation from the world beyond the prison walls remains a real impediment to offenders securing job opportunities, housing, transportation, and other supports prior to their release.

HOUSING

Some offenders remain in prison simply because housing cannot be located for them. This is especially true for sex-offenders who face a number of restrictions as to where they can live. Offenders who do find housing discover that temporary housing is too short-term for them to successfully reintegrate into society. This is particularly true for those who sleep in state-funded beds. Even worse is the outcome for offenders who fail to find housing and are sent back to prison after three attempts.

CATEGORIES OF HOUSING:

TRANSITIONAL HOUSING PROGRAMS: are a great option if you are not ready to live on your own, or if substance abuse is an issue.

SHELTERS: Shelters offer temporary housing and are helpful in emergency situations. See our list of temporary housing options reference pages xx-xx

TRANSITIONAL HOUSING: T.H.O.R. DIRECTORY

DEPARTMENT OF COMMUNITY SUPERVISION: T.H.O.R. DIRECTORY

The Department of Community Supervision (DCS) Reentry Services Division maintains the Transitional Housing for Offender Reentry (THOR) Directory to assist staff with making residence decisions. The THOR Directory contains two types of facilities: Structured Housing and Recovery Residences.

This directory contains community-based residential facilities that have met the standards on transitional housing for people on state supervision. The primary issues that are addressed before a facility is included in the THOR Directory are:

- Providing a safe and healthy environment for residents and staff,
- Maintaining consistent and timely resident and staff communication with supervising officers, and
- Delivering services that facilitate recovery from alcohol and other drugs and/or criminal lifestyles.

Clifton Sanctuary Ministries - Joe's Place

Joe's Place, Clifton's transitional living program, offers an additional component to men who have demonstrated the ability to live by Clifton's guidelines and are making positive progress in achieving their goals. A guest who is admitted into Joe's Place can stay in the program for up to 2 years. During this time, they receive intensive counseling in life skills management such as budgeting, job skills training, and relationship building.

Emergency Only Shelter, assists men over the age of 35 that have a referral from one of their partner agency's. That organization must contact Clifton Sanctuary on the applicant's behalf. The homeless and recently evicted in Atlanta, that do not have any income, can turn to Clifton Sanctuary Ministries for help and guidance. There is not currently any financial aid provided, however, shelter, meals, case management, and the free use of a computer lab are available.

Clifton Sanctuary Ministries Shelter is run from the church and relies on volunteers and others in the community. The center provides both overnight lodging and basic needs such as meals, personal hygiene items, and access to case management services. The use of the shelter may eventually lead to long-term transitional housing.
